Wrrn the approach of spring there come to us ominous rumors whose warning should not be disregarded. The increased mortality reports show that the dread epidemics of last year have only that which at all times should be a pleasant duty, becomes an imperative necessity. During the warm, damp days of spring and early summer, no more prollife breeder of disease can be found than the miasmar-generating piles of garbage and refuse matter that have accumulated in alleys and refuse matter that have accumulated in alleys and around dwellings during the winter months, and which are too often allowed to remain uncared for at this season of the year. A PEW weeks since, in commenting upon the remarkable increase of crime in this country, we suggested that an explanation of the phenomenon might be the infliction of punishment, and in the delays which too often are evolved from of shielding a criminal from the sentence his acts may have deserved. Since writing the article, we notice that the same subject has been attracting considerable attention among our Canadian neighbors, and that they, having experenced the same phenomenon, have arrived at the same conclusions in regard to its cause. In an article published in one of their papers upon this subject, the writer claims that, with them, as with us, "punishment for offenses less than capital is not sufficiently severe, beside the additional drawback of affording constant hope of evasion." The same wricases the prisons afford homes as comfortable as many of their inmates previously had," and that "except for the ieprivation of liberty, a quiet prisoner has little to complain of." With them, however, the recognition of the evil has been followed by an attempt at remedy, and they have begun the trial of flor ging as an addition to confinement in rage on a female, who was whipped in the presence of all the male inmates of the prison at Toronto, and it is said that those who witnessed the occurrence are inal classes.
